Dear Dr. Inoki:

Thank you for your letter of October 29. I also regret that I could not visit Japan this summer. As to next year, I am considering the alternatives of returning from Australia via Japan or via Europe, depending on the possibility of raising funds for the additional travel costs for my wife and myself.

I will be happy to review your paper on the akinetoplasmic forms, and if it is suitable to recommend it for the Journal of Bacteriology. Your other paper on Leishmania sounds to me as if it would definitely be more suitable for the Journal of Protozoology. This may also be true of your paper on trypanosomes, but I will wait to see it before making a definite decision.

As far as possible, I hope you will put the article in good English before submitting it. Perhaps Professor Kikkawa can help to criticize it. If I can be of further assistance, please let me ~~know~~ know. You should ask someone in the U.S. to be responsible for reading the proof, and should make arrangements about ordering reprints well in advance.

Yours sincerely,
